

Miele Energy Policy

Miele is an independent, value-oriented, and tradition-conscious family business that is equally committed to its employees, customers, business partners, and the public. Sustainability is an integral part of our corporate philosophy of "Immer Besser" and is reflected in our daily actions.

This energy policy defines binding principles for energy-conscious behavior and serves as a guideline for all employees, managers, and partners. It forms the basis for our energy management system in accordance with ISO 50001 and helps us to minimize risks and exploit opportunities for sustainable development.

The energy policy is embedded in the Group strategy and forms the framework for our energy management goals. We want to use energy economically and ecologically in order to contribute to the conservation of resources. We underpin this with ambitious sustainability and energy goals.

In addition, we are committed to the following principles and guidelines

- We ensure the availability of relevant information and the necessary resources to achieve the described and defined goals and energy targets.
- We comply with the applicable legal requirements relating to energy efficiency, energy use, and energy consumption and ensure compliance
- We want to continuously improve our energy-related performance in energy management and also demonstrate this continuously with a successful certificate
- We will consider energy-efficient products and services that have a relevant impact on energy-related performance in our procurement processes
- We use internal committees to support design-related activities that take into account the improvement of energy-related performance
- We communicate our energy policy and energy performance transparently to employees, business partners, and the public

The energy policy is reviewed regularly as part of continuous improvement processes.

Version: May 2026

Responsible: Albert Pauls (Central Energy Management Officer)

Dr. Stefan Brett
Executive Director Technology

Stefan Koss
Executive Director Finance and Administration